01 Overview

[REDACTED] helps US consumer brands sell on TikTok Shop. They handle the creator and affiliate partnerships that drive product content, run the paid ads on the back of that content, and manage live shopping events -- working with brands that are typically already doing $10k or more a month, across categories like pet products, supplements, home goods and beauty.

02 What we found

Everything below is a problem – checked directly in the Meta Ads account and on the live website on 4 September 2020.

Tracking

The tracking code on the website has an error in it and has never worked – not one single visit has ever been recorded, going back to before the ads even started running.

It was only just set up yesterday, one day before this audit – meaning the ads had already been running for about two and a half weeks with no tracking connected at all.

There's no system in place to tell which of the leads coming in are actually worth anything. Right now every lead is treated the same, whether it turns into a client or not.

Campaigns & leads

Only one campaign has ever run on this account. It has spent about $4000 in total and produced 55 leads – and as of today, it isn't running at all.

Of those 55 leads, none have become a paying client.

We don't currently have full access to manage the ads – the Facebook Page itself needs an access permission granted separately from the ad account access already given, before we can properly rebuild the campaign.

Targeting & ads

The ads are set to reach the entire United States, with a budget nowhere near large enough to do that effectively – and no narrowing at all on top of that. No age, gender, or interest targeting was ever applied, so the ads could show to any adult, anywhere in the country.

15 different ads were all running at once, splitting one small daily budget 15 ways. Just 4 of them ever produced a lead, the other 11 got almost nothing and never had a real chance.

A handful of ads had accumulated real leads at a reasonable cost – one in particular was bringing leads in at under $4 each – but they were switched off individually while several ads that had never produced a single lead were left running.

Older age groups – 45 and up – produced 8 out of every 10 leads, even though nothing was ever set up to target them specifically. That's a strong signal about who's actually interested, and nothing is currently being done with it.

Meta requires an active verification step for advertisers running in the US that hasn't been completed on this account yet. Until it is, there's a real risk the ads simply stop being allowed to run.

The ad copy promises brands "up to 100 million in sales in the next 30 days" — this breaks Facebook's own advertising rules and puts the whole ad account at risk. Meta's advertising policies don't allow exaggerated or unrealistic success claims, and this one isn't backed up anywhere. The biggest number [REDACTED] has actually published about its own results is around $225,000 over 28 days, and their own FAQ describes a much more modest outcome for a new brand. It states that this can get the ad disapproved, and repeated violations can get the whole ad account suspended — not just this one campaign.

Website (the exact page the ads send people to)

The website is slow to load, on both mobile and desktop — neither passes Google's own test for a fast site. That's their side to fix, but it matters to us directly: a slow-loading page loses visitors before they even see the offer we're paying to bring them.

Mobile — PageSpeed report

Desktop — PageSpeed report

The "Read Full Breakdown" buttons on the case studies don't work — they go nowhere. This is directly relevant to us. If someone clicks through from one of our ads and lands on this page wanting more detail, the button that's supposed to give it to them does nothing.

The numbers on that page's own case studies don't add up — they don't match the screenshots shown right next to them on the same page. If a prospect looks closely at the exact page our ad spend sends them to, the numbers don't hold together.

The testimonials and the "4.8/5" rating shown on that page aren't backed by any third review platform, and we couldn't verify the people quoted are real. Anyone who checks — and someone considering handing over their ad budget usually does — will notice.

03 Competitor research

Seven real, currently-operating TikTok Shop agencies serving US brands, checked directly on each business's own website.

Business	Price	Free call?	What they claim that [redacted] doesn't
Media Labs	Not published (20k-500k+ per range stated)	Yes, 30-min	Official TikTok Partner badge, $100k+ in sales managed, 500k+ creators
TikTok Partners	Not published	Yes, 30-min	Official Partner badge, $10k+ in monthly sales, 10k+ creator network
BrandCase Digital	Not published	No (contact form)	Official partner badge, named enterprise clients (Wish, Zillow, Microsoft)
Brand Commerce Club	Not published	No (contact form)	"Partner of the Year" badge, $100k+ in sales, named clients (Coca, H&M, Google)
Upstate	Not published	Yes, consultation	Official partner badge, "1 of 4 TikTok beta agencies," named clients (Wyn, Starbucks)
Revenue IQ	Not published	Yes, strategy call	Official partner badge, named clients (Walmart, Ford, Porsche)
The Brand Builders	Not published	Yes, "no promises, no guess"	Official partner badge, 8 named case studies with real results

A free call is the norm here, not the exception -- 6 of the 7 competitors lead with one.

An official TikTok Shop partner badge is often to universal -- 6 of the 7 display one. [redacted] doesn't show one anywhere on its site.

Competitors talk in bigger, more specific numbers than [redacted]'s own biggest published figure -- Media Labs states $100k+ in sales managed and 500k+ creators, TikTok states $10k+ a month and a 10k+ creator network.

Reluctant to this space publishes exact pricing -- that part is normal.

The "100k in 30 days" claim in [redacted]'s own ad is obviously big even against competitor marketing -- only one competitor shows a comparable result in a similar window, and it's one named case, not a promise made to everyone.

04 Keyword research

Published directly from Google Ads Keyword Planner, United States, English, Aug 2025–Jul 2026.

#	Keyword	Avg. monthly searches	Bid range	Competition
1	black shop agency	100	$1.40–$22.10	Medium
2	black shop management	70	$0.40–$24.20	Medium
3	agency black shop	70	No bid data	Medium
4	black affiliate marketing agency	No measurable volume	—	—

Search volume in this table is small across the board – this space isn't won by search ads, it's influenced and defined by other, which means that [redacted] and every competitor there actually finds clients today.

05 Marketing plan & recommendations

What we'll do

- We don't touch the existing account – all current ads, spend and lead history stay exactly as they are.
- We rebuild the tracking properly, so every visitor and every step is actually measured for the first time.
- We build a brand new lead form and a properly structured campaign around it – a narrow, hand-picked audience instead of the whole country, and a small number of strong ads instead of sixteen competing against each other for the same budget.
- Leads come in and your team calls or emails them directly, putting them to work a time on Calendly.
- We complete the UTM verification step Meta requires, so the ads aren't at risk of being stopped.
- We rework the ad messaging so the numbers being promised are ones the business can actually stand behind.

Outside our slice of this, the website's loading speed on both mobile and desktop, and the broken buttons and page issues we found on the exact page the ads point to, need fixing on your end – all of it is likely costing you visitors before they even see the offer.

Budget

Current spend is small and spread too thin to judge properly. We'd rather agree a realistic number together on the call than propose one blind.

What we'll charge

Full pricing: £1,200 + £1,200 + £1,200 + £1,200 – Have a look and we can talk through which package fits on the call.

What we can deliver

We can

- Get proper tracking working for the first time, so you can see what's actually happening after a lead comes in.
- Stop the budget being split 16 ways and rebuild around a narrow audience and a small number of strong ads.
- Keep the full account history intact – nothing deleted, nothing deleted.

We cannot

- Promise the "£10k in 30 days" figure the current ad implies – it isn't backed up anywhere in the business's own numbers.
- Fix the website itself – its speed and setup are outside what we manage.
- Guarantee that leads turn into paying clients. 16 leads have produced 0 so far, and without proper tracking in place we can't get any why.
